

DISCOVER IRELAND

Ireland's nickname, The Emerald Isle, comes from its lush landscapes and rolling green hills. A trip to this extraordinary place will allow you not only to relax and get in total contact with the surrounding nature but also to visit interesting and particular places, such as, for example, the first lighthouse in the world, built in 1768 which worked by candlelight before introducing oil in 1786, characteristic villages with colorful houses, a very hospitable, cheerful and friendly local population, and ancient Gaelic traditions, an island used as a monastic settlement in the 7th century and chosen as the location for an episode of Star Wars, one of the wildest and highest sea cliffs in Europe with spectacular views over the Atlantic Ocean and finally a place where you can see a sparkling blue bioluminescent lake at night.
